Since coming to the bar, Hernan has sought to build upon his broad experience in government and private practice. This experience helps him to better advise his clients in relation to the legal, technical and practical issues they face.

Hernan has a diverse class actions practice: he has acted in bushfire, investor, personal injury and human rights class actions. Since about 2014, he has been briefed in various bushfire cases and inquiries. He also has a commercial practice involving negligence, contract and consumer law claims, as well as building and construction disputes.

In addition to his work in royal commissions and the Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC), Hernan appears regularly in coronial inquiries and inquests.

Hernan works closely with solicitors in conferencing with witnesses and preparing cases for mediation and trial. He has a demonstrated ability to quickly master new and complex subject matter areas. For example, in the Ruby Princess class action, Hernan appeared for the respondents in relation to the medico-legal and damages aspects of the case, which included advising on evidence in relation to novel Long COVID claims.
